

But the modern Jew's sense of God requires us to do justice, love the ineffable does not necessarily lead him to the acceptance of the prescriptions of the law as an objective order of divine will, nor is it really true for the modern Jew, as Heschel says, that our belief that of thought," writes Heschel, "to do more than he understands in order to understand more than he does." But to say that a philosophy does not yet seem to have been fully worked through or systematized does not mean that it is not a philosophy or that it can properly be dismissed as "poetry" by those who do not wish to give it the careful reading and analysis it requires. The very problems with which Heschel leaves us are central to the dilemma of an American Judaism that wishes to be at once modern and traditional. Each of us, of course, must respond to Heschel's voice in his own way. But can we afford not to listen to it?

Hazanuth and Music in the State of Israel

By JACOB BELLER

MUSIC COMMANDS A VITAL PLACE in the Jewish State. It can be said that it was one of the Jewish "secret weapons" in the struggle which the Jews first carried on against the British and later in the shooting war with Arab countries. The first halutzim came to the shores of the Promised Land with the prayers and songs of Zion on their lips. On the scores of illegal ships which cut the billows of the sea on dark and moonless nights was heard the powerful song "Techezaknah." Jewish warriors prepared to meet the enemy with song and when the battle was won again sang a Shir HaNitzahon ("Song of Victory").

When the Israeli mother cradles her child she does not use those sentimental, nostalgic lullabies which we are familiar with for the Jewish child there must be toughened to cope with the enemies which surround him from all sides. As soon as the Israeli child is able to stand on his feet his first teaching in the kindergarten and later in the schools is through music.

Almost in every town there are dozens of children's choirs using various instruments, even flutes (halilim) such as the shepherds used in Biblical times. Almost every trade has its Tizmorah Hapool, (guild choir); even the firemen of Israel have their own "Tizmorah Maccabi Eysh". In addition to these there are the army and air force choirs.

At other times in history the Jews poured out all their sorrow and pain into the longing for Israel. In addition to romantic songs always popular with the love-lorn, the Israeli song is cheerful and lively yet is without the tediousness of
