DODGE AUTO BODY TEST REVEALS STRENGTH AND BALANCE OF CAR

A spectacular movie of an engineering experiment in which Dodge Brothers Mono-Piece body sedan is seen hurtling down a steep mountainside has proved a unique feature of interest at Dodge Dealer meetings held throughout Canada.

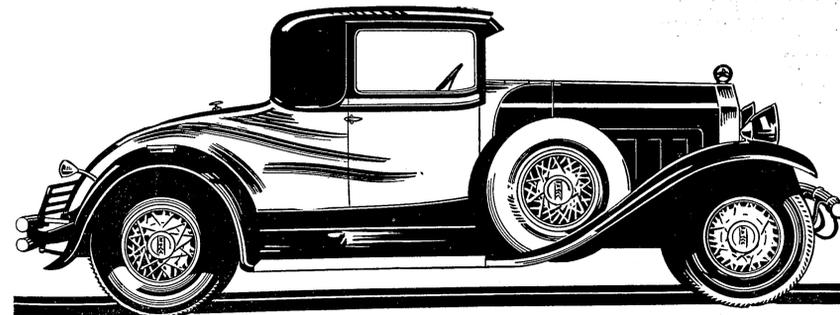

Planned originally to test the strength of Mono-Piece metal bodies, pioneered in this country on Dodge Brothers automobiles, the experiment upon which this dramatic and intensely interesting film was based proved equally effective in measuring the sturdiness of chassis, frame, wheels—in fact all parts of the car.

Three different times the car is seen "taking-off" from a special runway built on the mountainside. Altogether it is turned completely over nine times on its way to the bottom of the hill. Twice its descent is checked by its own inherent balance.

On the third and last trip in this scientific demonstration, the car makes three complete turns before its perfect balance arrests its descent for

Where one finds people of distinction, one also finds cars of distinction. At Murray Bay for instance — at Banff, Kenora and all other fashionable resorts — the modern Willys-Knight is an accustomed sight.

The increasing popularity of this magnificent car among the socially prominent follows an established European precedent. King George and the Prince of Wales have long driven in Knight - motored cars. King Albert of Belgium, King Alfonso of Spain and half the aristocracy of the continent prefer them for personal use.

Undiminished after one hundred thousand miles of driving... its patented sleeve-valve principle eliminates the necessity of lay-ups for valve-grinding and carbon cleaning... in it there are no valve springs to weaken, no tappets to become noisy.
