BRITISH LEADERS SCORE MANDATORY POWER

London, (WNS) — The lack of co-operation extended to the Jewish people by the British Government in Palestine was the main theme at a banquet tendered to members of the Parliamentary Pro-Palestine Committee at the Anglo-Palestine Bank, with James de Rothschild, presiding. Taking issue with the Revisionists for their demand that England give up her Palestine Mandate, de Rothschild pointed out that such demands rise from the failure of England to make her friendship felt effectively. He asserted that England is the only country which can help the Jews in Palestine. He emphasized the fact that Jews, in rebuilding Palestine, want to be restored as a "nation." Therefore, they must have all the rights that go with a national home. Other speakers included John Buchan, Chairman of the Pro-Palestine Committee, Lord Hartington, Barnett Janner, and Marcus Nathan, M.P.s, and also D'Avigdor Goldsmid, Chairman of the Council of the Jew-

Continued from Page 1 Dr. S. Margoshes was among the Jewish representatives who pleaded before the House Immigration Committee in Washington for a more humane application of immigration laws. Dr. Wise, in his usually forceful way, characterized the men sponsoring bills for increased immigration restrictions as "sadists." The qualification will stand. For nobody expects the House Committee on Immigration to open the doors of the United States to greater immigration when the crisis of unemployment demands further restriction. What Dr. Wise meant to convey was that the gentlemen who guide the fate of the new immigration bill should not forget the human phase of its provisions. Family life must be preserved. Children should not be kept from their parents. Husbands should be permitted to join their wives. This is feasible without endangering the economic structure of the country. But if the new immigration regulations do not take this into account, the title, "sadists," is the only qualification that fits these gentlemen.

Rabbi Chaim Weiss, "miracle Rabbi" of Welmen, Jugoslavia, has predicted in a cable that the son of Charles A. Lindbergh will be returned by the kidnapers within a week. We hope that the venerable Rabbi's prediction will come true, yet we cannot suppress our indignation that some publicity racketeers in New York have seen fit to drag Rabbi Weiss's name in the Lindbergh tragedy. There is no doubt that the gentlemen who are responsible for this choice bit of information have in mind some institution or some schorner scheme in connection with this prediction. But whatever the purpose, such action is to be condemned. Jewry no less than any element in the United States prays for the safe return of Lindbergh's son. The miracle Rabbi of Jugoslavia should have known better, however, than to heed the request to cable his views on the Lindbergh mystery.

The death of Boris Schatz is a profound shock to Jews. Sculptor, painter and engraver, Boris Schatz was a distinguished artist of his period. His outstanding achievement, however, was the founding and maintenance of the Bezalel Art School and Museum, for which he almost singlehanded is responsible. Schatz's vision was a modern art school that should develop Jewish art in Palestine and also guide the industries related to arts and craft. His pioneer work in this direction was gigantic. Although he fell short of his vision, Boris Schatz has built a monument for himself that will tell future generations of his indefatigable devotion and his profound understanding of the special needs of Palestine. The Bezalel School may not be able to function now that its builder and inspiration have gone. But regardless of its future, its past record will be forgotten when the history of modern Palestine is written.

Death of an Artist

Dr. Abraham J. Rongy is a distinguished physician in Something Must Have New York. For Happened a good many years he has devoted most of his leisure to Jewish affairs. He has played a prominent role in the American Zionist movement and been very much in the foreground of many other Jewish movements. At no time did he make one suspect that he considered Jewish life in this country of ours hopeless. In a recent interview with Henry Montor, Dr. Rongy in unusually clear and strong language qualifies Jewish leadership as inept, aimless and irresponsible and Jewish life in America as disorganized. Rongy is not the type of man to use extravagant adjectives. He is fully aware of his responsibility. What has happened? Following on the heels of Rabbi Goldman's "A Rabbi Takes Stock" and Maurice Samuel's "Jews On Approval" it emphasizes that the critical attitude of these two authors is by no means accidental. It also underlines the many fearless statements made by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise at various occasions, primarily in recent years. It stands in sharp contrast to the view taken by Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver that Jews of America may well be satisfied with their achievements and with the status of their leadership. But the import of Dr. Rongy's views lies in the fact that they come from a man without personal prejudice against any individuals or institutions. This does not imply that the criticism of any of the authors mentioned is in any way tainted by personal relationship to their subject. What we mean to say is that any charge or accusation against Rongy that his views are influenced by personal factors would be ludicrous. Thus Rongy's evaluation of American Jewish life deserves serious study. It should be a signal for a genuine attempt to probe the real status of the issues he raises.

Our Own Hall of Fame RUBEEN BRAININ

A public testimonial on the occasion of his 70th anniversary, will be held on April second, sponsored by a committee of which Professor Albert Einstein is a member.

BECAUSE he is an unbending character that recognizes but one God: the truth. BECAUSE he is a fighter who takes delight in battling upstream, against the current, for his ideas and principles. BECAUSE as one of the builders of Hebrew literature, as one of its most distinguished stylists, he has contributed permanent values to the cultural renaissance of our people. BECAUSE he is a Zionist who believes that Zionism means to be first, a man, then a Jew and then a Zionist — which does not mean that these three conceptions are contradictory but merely signifies the scope of his Weltanschauung. BECAUSE when a petty intolerance dominated Zionist and Hebraist circles against the Jewish colonization movement in Soviet Russia, he came out unreservedly against that narrow attitude. BECAUSE he is an unpractical dreamer who loves the cause of every minority and loses interest in it as soon as it becomes a success. BECAUSE he is a revolutionary who was in the front ranks of Zionism and Hebrew literature at the time when these movements represented a revolution in the life of the Jewish people. BECAUSE he was one of the most intimate friends of Theodor Herzl but did not shrink from fighting him whenever necessary. BECAUSE he was the first to launch the idea of a Hebrew University in Jerusalem. BECAUSE of his versatility as a man of letters, he being a critic, biographer, novelist, publicist, translator, historian and, above all, a true mold-er of public opinion. BECAUSE after more than half a century of ceaseless, uninterrupted literary and public work he is a poor man, whom money never attracted, who is always ready to give half of his earthly possession to the first needy man he meets. BECAUSE he is a grand old man, intellectually on the qui vive, ready to welcome any social experiment, eager to learn, prepared to sacrifice without complaints if truth demands it. BECAUSE Reuben Brainin believes in keeping faith with the Jewish people rather than with any particular party. He will remain in the annals of Jewish history BECAUSE he gave all and asks nothing.
