

was conducted by a composer who had made a name for himself locally. The picture is, of course, altogether different in the thriving suburbs.

In addition to the synagogues, large numbers of other communal bodies are affiliated to the two Jewish Boards of Deputies. Sydney, the capital of New South Wales, has its own New South Wales Board, while Melbourne, the capital of Victoria, is the headquarters of the Victorian Board. The two bodies work in close collaboration and move their headquarters and session periodically from one town to the other.

was elected Senator, the Board saw fit to describe him as "persona non grata." The leader of the country's opposition party, Mr. Calwell, had to call on the Jewish community to stop "washing their dirty linen in public." A positive achievement is the establishment of the Hillel Foundation which has secured the services of Rabbi Rackovsky from America. He is a shining example of tolerance and, as an Orthodox rabbi, works in collaboration with all sections of the community.

IT IS FOR US TO ACCEPT OURSELVES

By A. M. SONNABEND President, American Jewish Committee

Jewishness means many things. The President of the American Jewish Committee looks at some questions concerning Jewish identity which are of increasing concern to American Jews. —Ed.

THERE is no one answer to the question "What does it mean to be a Jew?" To each of us, it is something different — a personal, unique experience. To all of us it has meant, at one time or another, an awareness of catastrophe. A few months ago, I went on an American Jewish Committee mission to Europe, the Vatican and Israel. In Israel, I saw the memorial in Jerusalem to six million Jews destroyed by the Nazis. It is a grim and sorrowful building which houses the documentary evidence of humanity's shame — names, photographs, concentration camp uniforms, the yellow armbands. The sense of catastrophe was brought home to me very sharply. Yet in Israel, itself, I saw many things which were the very opposite of catastrophe. Here were people — Jews, many of them with nightmarish memories — building, working, playing, looking forward to the future with great spirit and hope despite the fact that they were ringed by hostile neighbors.

One particular portion of the Committee's philosophy and program is directly related to the question of identity as a Jew. We describe ourselves, and we are, a movement which aims for full participation of Jews in every aspect of American life, while retaining our Jewish identity and our devotion to Jewish ideals. Our shorthand word for this process is integration. It provokes a great deal of discussion since many of us are concerned about our group identity. Back in my school days, one of the ideas we used to learn in civics was that America was a melting-pot. Even then, that notion made me feel uncomfortable. I was quite pleased, years later, to find that it was one of those social theories which became obsolete very quickly. Nobody likes to be melted down to look like everybody else. Each of us wants this own unique identity, and many of us spend a lifetime pursuing it. Ultimately, we find we may have many different identities
