his classroom or clubroom with slides or a film-strip, and he'll listen and learn. That's why we're trying to get American Jewish organizations to back us in this. It's an important job and we're the only ones who can do it. We want financial backing to let us give Israelis a real picture of American Jewry.

Murray also discussed the AACI's overseas membership campaign which at $10 a member has signed up over 1,000 Americans. "Our biggest problem is the lack of good solid backing from America. The South Africans here have the support of the South African Zionist Federation, the British ditto, we have our overseas members — and little else."

Murray himself was born in Far Rockaway, New York, in 1926. He came to Palestine as a crew member on the refugee boat "Hatikvah," was interned on Cyprus by the British for trying to bring refugees through their blockade. "Did you know that 40 per cent of the illegals came on boats manned by Americans? That's part of the story we're trying to tell. Then there is Machal, the special overseas volunteer unit in Israel's battle for liberation — 70 Americans died in Machal, and American tourists don't even visit the forest we've planted in their memory. The Israelis — they act like they never even heard of Machal. That's also something we want to educate them about." Then came work as an investment counselor with the Palestine Economic Corporation. Typically, Murray was the first licensed guide in the country, he organized the first public relations congress, and worked for the ZOA House before coming to the AACI.

And that isn't all. Murray and his charming wife Hana — who came to Israel from Czechoslovakia — operate the Art Gallery in Tel Aviv's Sheraton Hotel. Their art gallery has established branches in Eilat and Beersheba and arranges art exhibits in the United States. "You have to go into business to make a living here, otherwise I couldn't afford to work for the Association," Murray explained with a smile. "After all, I have three children to support."

Murray is also an active member of the Progressive Synagogue organized in Kfar Shmaryahu, a Tel Aviv suburb — but then he's active in just about everything.

One thing I learned. If you want to live in Israel, or find out anything about Israel — the person to go see is Murray.
