A most gratifying phenomenon is the increase in the number of young composers striving for independent and original expression. Several of these young composers were indeed born abroad, but they have grown up and finished their training in this country.

Reuben (Robert) Storer of Jerusalem (a pupil of Gruendel, Pintos, and Rozovsky), a musician of great talent is a pianist and an inspired composer. The list of his compositions is varied, and includes a Prelude and Fugue for wind instruments, Sonata for Violin and Orchestra, Oriental Hebrew Rhapsody, a Fantasia on Jewish themes for viola and piano, Suite for Strings, a Suite for Piano, and other compositions. Several of his works have been performed by the Philharmonic Orchestra.

Ben Zion Orgad, a pupil of Paul Ben Haim, is a young composer of high intellectual attainments and poetic vision, who in spite of his youth — he is only twenty-three — has achieved a remarkable command of the technique of composition. Of an independent nature, he strives for inner expression. His "Scenes" was performed by the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra last season, under the direction of Jasha Horenstein, the guest conductor.

Moshe Lustig, pianist and member of the Jerusalem Radio Orchestra, has arranged a large number of songs and popular melodies for various combinations of instruments. His original compositions include two sonatas for piano, sonata and sonatina for harp, a "Suite for Small Orchestra", songs with accompaniment for strings, harp, and flute, and other compositions.

Benjamin Bar-Am, another pupil of Ben Haim's is a lyricist of a high order, with a fine capacity for melodic invention and an outstanding feeling for harmony. His compositions include "Gedulah" (Redemption) a cantata for baritone and piano, a song cycle, and various other songs including "Zichru Ot!" (Remember me!), which was awarded first prize in a competition held by the Cultural Centre.

Avraham Sternklar, pianist and composer, a pupil of Starominsky and Ben Haim, has among the compositions to his credit a suite for piano, a sonata for piano, and a recently published collection of melodies.

These are some of the young musicians of outstanding talent likely to be among the future creators of Israel music. In most of them are joined the desire and ambition to seek for means for self-expression and the formation of an Israel style."

Purely Commentary: Hadassah's Work In Israel

Over 57 Child Welfare Centres Serving Jewish State; Medical Program Gigantic
By PHILIP SLOMOVITZ

Hadassah's 57 child welfare centres are modelled after the significant set-up in the Holy City. Since the evacuation of the main buildings on Mount Scopus upon the outbreak of the Arab-Jewish war, the Hadassah program is carried on in four buildings in the New City.

Mrs. Sari Berger, who supervises the Hadassah Club, was especially anxious that Hadassah's greetings should go forth from Jerusalem to Mrs. Joseph H. Ehrlich and all her co-workers.

Hadassah, as the mother medical movement in Palestine, has turned over a number of its buildings to municipalities. The Tel Aviv Hadassah hospital, where Dr. Israel Heyman is serving in the pediatrics department, is now operated by the all-Jewish city.

The Haifa Hadassah hospital also has been turned over to the municipality and similar plans are being made for the Tiberias hospital. Hadassah, however, has no intention ever to turn the Medical school over to anyone but will continue to operate it.

Hadassah's several departments specialize in infant welfare, social hygiene and occupational therapy. Mothers and their children are taught vocations.

The Brandeis building has wings dedicated to the memory of Judge Julian W. Mack and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise. It is located on Nathan Straus street which the British tried without success to perpetuate as Chamberlain street, in the name of the man who was considered the most vicious anti-Jewish High Commissioner.

Hadassah women have reason to be proud of all their efforts.
