for the poor refugees of the world war, naturally with my participation. All the Jews of Denmark came! All workers. It also made some money and now a kitchen is being set up for the poor. I read from my works, the audience laughed as always, only it occurred to no one that the poorest and most unfortunate and loneliest immigrant—that was I.

HISTADRUT AS TRADE UNION

Histadrut brought to the Middle East a new respect for the working man. Histadrut, even during the days of British control, installed the eight-hour working day in a land where labor was as degraded in the twentieth century as it had been in the Middle Ages. Wages have reached decent standards. In Israel, pay envelopes are four or five times as high as in Egypt, Syria and other Middle Eastern countries—because only in Israel are Jewish and Arab workers highly organized.

Another feather in Israel's cap brought about by Histadrut is the establishment of equal wages for Jews and Arabs, who are now fully equals before the law of the land.

To top the economic achievements of Histadrut is the comprehensive social security program for all members: unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, care for widows and orphans, and full health insurance.

through labor's own medical network of clinics and hospitals. Half a million persons are covered by these health plans on a voluntary basis, with only a minimum participation so far on the part of employers or government. In time, the latter will also carry a fair share of the load.

In the small State of Israel fifteen dailies are being published; ten in Hebrew, two in German, one in English, one in Arabic, and one in French. Twelve are morning papers and three are evening papers. The total circulation of these 15 publications is about 250,000. The highest individual circulation (45,000) is enjoyed by "Yedioth Maariv," an independent evening paper edited by the veteran journalist Carlebach. The largest morning paper is "Davar," organ of the Jewish Federation of Labor (circulation 35,000); and closely followed by "Haaretz," an independent morning paper closely identified with the General Zionist movement. "Hatzofe," organ of the religious orthodox circles, commands a circulation of about 7,000, while the Communist daily, "Kol Ha-am" circulates 6,000 copies. The circulation of the "Palestine Post," English daily, exceeds 15,000.

The Last "Shiur" In Slobodka Yeshiva

By RABBI EPHRAIM OSHRY, Dean of Yeshiva "Mor Hagolah," Montreal

Who among us has not heard the name Slobodka? Slobodka was not merely a community with Jews — not merely a Lithuanian Jewish centre with tradition, with her own individual way of life that made her stand out in the Jewish scene. Slobodka was rather a complete world in itself — a unique world of Yeshivos, famous for their contributions to the study and development of Torah, and especially so because of its great, world-famous Yeshiva "Knesses Israel."

"Knesses Israel" was known and recognized throughout the Torah world as the "Slobodka Yeshiva" and as such we will write about her. "Knesses Israel" will also go down in Jewish history as the Slobodka Yeshiva — she was the largest Yeshiva in Slobodka and among the greatest in the world.

But alas. The "Slobodka Yeshiva" in Europe is no longer. Great efforts are being exerted to rebuild this gigantic citadel in Bnei-Brak in Eretz Israel. May these efforts with God's help be crowned with success. But her predecessor in Slobodka has been wiped off the map of the Jewish world, together with her "baale-batim" and wonderful students. God, how can one write about such a "churban"? And how can one forget — from the other side — that besides a small group of students that find themselves in Jerusalem where the Yeshiva continues under the guidance of its Rosh—Yeshiva-Hagaon Reb Isak Sher — all is destroyed and devastated?

Slobodka is no longer — erased, eradicated, removed from God's earth. I saw with my own eyes how this great calamity happened. But how to tell it — dear Jews? All remember Slobodka. Slobodka is a world evaluation — an historic evaluation and trend of thought—for all eternity bound up with the battle of "Yisroel Sovva" — for the survival of our spirit — in the war between Israel and the nations. This spiritual warrior — Slobodka — all remember. And this historic and epoch-making Slobodka will never be vanquished. She lives now in Jerusalem; soon we hope in her own home, Bnei-Brak. Her soul and spirit will be relieved through the handful of students rescued by the "Hashgacha" from the crematoriums and gas chambers. But not about this new, eternal and recreated Slobodka do I wish to write.

This time, I want to write about Slobodka that all Lithuanian Jewry remembers with respect and reverence — the Slobodka of the "nausomocks" — the ethical devotees and interpreters of Torah — of Knesses Israel.

Lithuanian Jews remember the
