

recall the early days of Congress, powers of Canadian Jewry, they are will probably recall a period of anxiety for its small financial needs at that time. The optimists of that day who are still among the living and who had faith in the creative have long ago fallen by the way-side.

WE HAVE NOT despaired of the Jewish will to live, and that is why we are assembled here today to mark the close of two centuries of Jewish life in Canada, as well as to plan our course for the future. We need but grow in stature and in vision to understand that ours is the opportunity to provide for our children the means by which they may grow Jewishly through an educational process which extends beyond the infantile and the elementary. We need the vision to understand this opportunity and the courage to take up this challenge.

Speaking at the Conference of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds held in Washington, D.C., in the spring of this year, Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver spoke out forthrightly when he said: "The problem confronting us is no longer Americanization, nor immigration, nor even the pressing relief of our indigent poor. We have passed beyond some of these problems and have the others be educated and inspired. Their self-consciousness as Jews—if it is not to be an irritant—must be refined through self-understanding so that out of deep knowledge may flow strong devotions. "If you will it, it is not a dream!"

Aply has the American Survey employed the simile of the shallow river, for Jewish tradition has always likened Torah to water. When the prophet Isaiah speaks of the earth being full of knowledge he says: "for the earth shall be full of knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea." In this spirit, and in the hope that Congress will give us the required leadership in the needed implementation of an effective program of Jewish education such as we have here envisaged, we pray that the blessings bestowed by the Psalmist upon the righteous man may be fulfilled in a righteous Jewish Community in Canada.

planted by the streams of water, that bringeth forth its fruit in its season, and the leaf of which (meaning our children, the coming generation) doth not wither, and whatsoever he may do shall prosper."
